The Buss-Perry Aggression Questionnaire (BPAQ) is a popular measure of aggression in adults. Men show a higher level of aggression than women (Archer, 2000). This study identified emotional responses of people with different aggressive traits to pictures according to their scores on the Buss-Perry Aggression Questionnaire. Experiential avoidance was predictive of aggressive behavior even after controlling for other factors (Fink, L. & Behar, A., 2002).

In this study, we assessed the cross-cultural generalizability of the Reactive-Proactive Aggression Questionnaire (RPQ) and tested the hypotheses.
